

MEMORIES LEFT UNSAID

by

MRETYUN JAI B

Prologue

The heaviest words are the ones we never had the courage to speak.

Chapter One

The Old Leather Notebook

In the top drawer of his study desk sat a dusty leather notebook with yellowed pages.

Inside were pages filled with dates, places, and half-written letters never sent.

Each page held a memory from a time when choices seemed simpler.

He opened to the first page written six years ago on a quiet Sunday afternoon.

Some memories fade with time. Others stay as sharp as the day they were born.